Editorial

On 8th March the International Women's Day was observed. A number of events were undertaken countrywide commemorating this day. The most remarkable feature of these events was the enthusiastic participation of men. ASF is probably the first organization emphasizing that gender issues are not exclusively meant for women; men should take responsibility as well. On this day, back in the year 2002, ASF organized an assembly and a rally of 5,000 men who joined together to vow against acid violence. After 2002 similar events have been organized every year. It is worthy to note that how many other organizations are recognizing the need of male involvement of males as well and are coming up with new concepts in this regard. The understanding and appreciation of complementing roles of both men and women, is indeed encouraging. We believe that the image of men as women’s if such contribution of men is brought to public attention oppressors is now countereacted by the positive role as supportive companion. And the society will see the emergence of positive male role models.

We appreciate the role media played in bringing about positive societal transformation regarding human rights issues in general and acid violence in particular.

Besides other regular features, this issue of Voice focuses on the activities of ASF and collaborating organizations commemorating the Women’s Day. We would like to express our appreciation to the readers and supporters of Voice.
ASF's Declaration for International Women's Day

One aware man can raise awareness in another man. An aware man, by endorsing the stance against acid attacks will not stay quiet, but will say “NO” to all forms of violence against women and children.

While all over the world, women are taking positive steps forwards; the women of our country are facing different forms of torture all the time. Torture such as the deplorable acid attack. Everyday, women and children are losing their normal lives by being burnt in these barbaric attacks. Amongst whom, a notice able number are below the age of 18. This heinous crime destroys societal balance and has resisted the national development process. From families, from society and from the state, we need to remove this abominable offence. We need to voice our protest loudly while prevention needs to be more organized.

We need to emphasize that these offenders have no place in the home, in society and in the country. To confront this problem respectfully, to protest against these attackers and to empower women and children, it is important for men and boys to come forward today. It is important that men's and boys' attempts of endorsing this campaign resonates throughout all households.

One aware man can raise awareness in another man. An aware man, by endorsing the stance against acid attacks will not stay quiet, but will say "NO" to all forms of violence against women and children.

We need to ensure women's human rights in the following three areas: a life free from oppression and violence, freedom of speech and finally, involvement in the decision-making process: in the home, society and state.

8th March is International Women's Day. Men and women on an equal foundation are contributing to create a healthy and happy home, and finally, a peaceful society. Today's objective is to implement an example for men. Those who oppose acid attacks will always and everyday oppose all forms of violence against women and children.

In celebration of International Women's Day, active and concerned men and boys are taking part in Dhaka and in different districts. In this respect, as an aware man and boy join hands with us. Make your friends and colleagues aware.

Our Pledge:

- Effective implementation of the Acid Crime Control act of 2002, where speedy trials need to be ensured.
- The government must uphold the Acid Control Act.
- The support service for attacked women and children needs to be ensured
- Men should get active to raise awareness against violence against women and children.
Press Conference commemorating the International Women’s Day

Keeping the participation of men against all kinds of violence against women on the focus, ASF organized a press conference in the Press Club on the evening of 5th March to announce the events to be undertaken on the International Women’s Day. Men have their own role to play to fight against violence against women - by refraining themselves from not involving himself in such crimes, by encouraging others to do so as well and by defending against any violent attack.

Speakers at this press conference included Monira Rahman - the Executive Director of ASF, Ilias Kanchan and Suvo Dev on behalf of Forum Star against Acid Throwers, Habibur Rahman on behalf of National Network Campaign for Working with Men and Boys and Mahbuba Haque Kumkum - the Prevention Coordinator of ASF. The press conference conducted on the International Women’s Day that socially conscious men will declare their solidarity against violence against women and children.

One of the main attractions of ASF’s campaign program is the assembly and a rally of men on that day. A similar rally organized by ASF acted as a milestone in the year of 2002. In continuation of this event, ASF is organizing men rallies on the International Women’s Day every year.

Rally and Pledge of Men against Acid Violence

Case History

After the police failed to arrest the perpetrator who through acid on me, I had lived a life without meaning. Now that he has been brought to justice, my trust in police has returned. Hasina Akter

In their International Women's Day issue, Prothom Alo published an interview of eight acid survivors working in ASIF. In that special supplement, Hasina was quoted as saying that the perpetrator has been in hiding for long and is out of the reach of police. This caught the attention of the Inspector General of Police (IGP). He immediately instructed the Superintendent of Naryanganj Police to look into the matter. They began a head hunt for Amir Hossain, the man behind this atrocity. First, the brother of Hossain was arrested and then on a tip from him, the police went to Narsingi, learnt that Hossain was living in Satkania, Chittagong with his family and collected his cell phone number from his nephew. Police set out for Satkania that very night and after failing to get information from his wife learnt about his whereabouts from his child. Hossain was arrested at midnight on March 9th.

On learning the news of Hossain’s arrest Hasina went to Arailhazar police station. The next day at 10 in the morning, Hasina thrashed Hossain with her shoe in front of a mass gathering. The crowd applauded Hasina for that. Hasina said I demand justice for the crimes against me. The man who has done this to me must be given exemplary punishment so that none in future dare to commit such an offense. I still fear that he slips free through the loopholes of the legal system. I still wonder why he was not captured for three years when now the police is able to catch him within twenty-four hours. The police is capable of doing everything if they only wish.

On 22 January, 2004 Amir Hossain, a house servant, threw acid on Hasina, daughter of Abu Taher Mia of Naryanganj over a trifling issue. She couldn’t even be given the immediate treatment with water because of the malfunctioning tube well. She suffered massive burns on her face and body. Her father filed a case the next day but the criminal moved freely for three long years. Her family was drained out of money baying the cost of the legal case and she could not continue her studies. Presently Hasina is serving in the Legal Unit of ASIF as an intern. Despite all the obstacles she facing Hasina is determined to make her life a success.
